VOICE AND SIGHT IN WONDERFUL TESLA WAVES

INVENTOR DECLARES ONE CAN SEE AND HEAR ANY DISTANCE

STATIC DISTURBANCE
FINALLY OVERCOME

BUILDING WIRELESS "CENTRAL"
FOR WORLD SYSTEM OF COMMUNICATION

New York, Oct. 6.—Nikola Tesla announced tonight that he had received a patent on an invention which would not only eliminate static interference, the present bugaboo of wireless telephony, but would enable thousands of persons to talk at once between wireless stations and make it possible for those talking to see one another by wireless, regardless of the distance separating them. He said also that with his wireless station now in the process of construction on Long Island he hoped to make New York one of the central exchanges in a world system of wireless telephony.

Tesla exhibited an article published in the Electrical World 12 years ago in which he predicted not only wireless telephony on a commercial basis, but that it would be possible to identify the voice of an acquaintance over any distance. That his operator in Hawaii was able to distinguish the voice of an engineer friend at Arlington, Va., was announced by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company as the most marked triumph of its communication by wireless telephone from the naval radio station at Arlington to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, a distance of 4600 miles.

The statement of Tesla today was as follows:

"The experts carrying out the recent wireless experiment are deserving of great credit for the skill they have shown in perfecting the devices. These are of two kinds: First, those serving to control transmission; and second, those magnifying the received impulse. It is perfectly apparent that the chief merit of the application lies in the magnification of the microphone impulse.

Can Talk Across Globe.

"That it is practicable to project the human voice not only to a distance of 300 miles but clear across the globe I have demonstrated by experiments in Colorado in 1899. Among my publications I would refer to an article in the Electrical
